Playing to Win Hilary Levey Friedman, 2013-08-03 Many parents work more hours outside of the home and their lives are crowded with more obligations than ever before many children spend their evenings and weekends trying out for all star teams traveling to regional and national tournaments and eating dinner in the car while being shuttled between activities In this vivid ethnography based on almost 200 interviews with parents children coaches and teachers Hilary Levey probes the increase in children's participation in activities outside of the home structured and monitored by their parents when family time is so scarce As the parental second shift continues to grow alongside it a second shift for children has emerged especially among the middle and upper middle classes which is suffused with competition rather than mere participation What motivates these particular parents to get their children involved in competitive activities Parents primary concern is their children's access to high quality educational credentials the biggest bottleneck standing in the way of or facilitating entry into membership in the upper middle class Competitive activities like sports and the arts are seen as the essential proving ground that will clear their children's paths to the Ivy League or other similar institutions by helping them to develop a competitive habitus This belief motivated both by reality and by perception and shaped by gender and class affects how parents envision their children's futures it also shapes the structure of children's daily lives what the children themselves think about their lives and the competitive landscapes of the activities themselves

Contemporary Fiction and Christianity Andrew Tate, 2010-10-12 The First Book Jesse Zuba, 2025-07-15 An illuminating look at the poetic debut in twentieth century American literary culture We have many poets of the First Book the poet and critic Louis Simpson remarked in 1957 describing a sense that the debut poetry collection not only launched the contemporary poetic career but also had come to define it Surveying American poetry over the past hundred years The First Book explores the emergence of the poetic debut as a unique literary production with its own tradition conventions and dynamic role in the literary market Through new readings of poets ranging from Wallace Stevens and Marianne Moore to John Ashbery and Louise Glück Jesse Zuba illuminates the importance of the first book in twentieth century American literary culture which involved complex struggles for legitimacy on the part of poets critics and publishers alike Zuba investigates poets diverse responses to the question of how to launch a career in an increasingly professionalized literary scene that threatened the authenticity of the poetic calling He shows how modernist debuts evoke markedly idiosyncratic paths while postwar first books evoke trajectories that balance professional imperatives with traditional literary ideals Debut titles ranging from Simpson's The Arrivistes to Ken Chen's Juvenilia stress the strikingly pervasive theme of beginning accommodating a new demand for career development even as it distances the poets from that demand Combining literary analysis with cultural history The First Book will interest scholars and students of twentieth century literature as well as readers and writers of poetry
