Dogopolis Chris Pearson, 2024-05-31 Dogopolis presents a surprising source for urban innovation in the history of three major cities human canine relationships Stroll through any American or European city today and you probably won't get far before seeing a dog being taken for a walk It's expected that these domesticated animals can easily navigate sidewalks streets and other foundational elements of our built environment But what if our cities were actually shaped in response to dogs more than we ever realized Chris Pearson's Dogopolis boldly and convincingly asserts that human canine relations were a crucial factor in the formation of modern urban living Focusing on New York London and Paris from the early nineteenth century into the 1930s Pearson shows that human reactions to dogs significantly remolded them and other contemporary western cities It's an unalterable fact that dogs often filthy bellicose and sometimes off putting run away spread rabies defecate and breed wherever they like so as dogs became a more and more common in nineteenth century middle class life cities had to respond to people's fear of them and revulsion at their least desirable traits The gradual integration of dogs into city life centered on disgust at dirt fear of crime and vagrancy and the promotion of humanitarian sentiments On the other hand dogs are some people's most beloved animal companions and human compassion and affection for pets and strays were equally powerful forces in shaping urban modernity Dogopolis details the complex interrelations among emotions sentiment and the ways we manifest our feelings toward what we love showing that together they can actually reshape society

Faith in the Town Hannah Barker,Carys Brown,Kate Gibson,Jeremy Gregory,2025-02-28 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4 0 International licence It is free to read on the Oxford Academic platform and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations Across eighteenth and early nineteenth century northern England religious faith continued to affect the lives of men women and children in profound ways Rather than abandoning their faith in the face of increasing urbanisation and industrialisation as is often assumed was the case town dwellers across the social and denominational spectrum commonly understood their relationships with their families households and the world within a framework of religious duty and virtue For urban middling and labouring individuals religious practice and the influence of faith was not limited to time spent in church or chapel but extended into all areas of activity and experience the workplace the streets and other public spaces and the home The importance of faith in the lived experience of town dwellers was not something that existed in spite of change faith was promoted by the new conditions of urban life Faith in the Town explores key decades of this transformational period encompassing almost a century of urban development between 1740 and 1830 By placing lay religious belief centre stage this book demonstrates that many of the developments associated with modernity specifically industrialisation urbanisation population growth and Enlightenment thinking were not inimical to faith Instead religious belief and lay piety was a crucial element in the formation of urban economy society and culture during the long eighteenth century meaning that northern towns were not only places where faith could both be nourished and flourish but that these urban centres were themselves shaped by faith

Dogópolis Chris Pearson,2023-03-22 Si pasea por cualquier ciudad occidental hoy d a no tardar mucho en ver a un perro Se espera que estos animales domesticados puedan moverse f cilmente writing on cities and to propose alternative research possibilities with implications as much for urban design thinking as for history and the social sciences

Die Stadt lesen Cristina Sasse, 2021-06-08 Sogenannte directories gedruckte Aufstellungen der Gewerbetreibenden einer Stadt die oft kombiniert waren mit Reiseführerähnlichen Inhalten avancierten in England ab dem 18. Jahrhundert zu populären Medien. In einer Phase rasanter Urbanisierung erfüllten sie vielfältige Funktionen für die Orientierung in städtischen Räumen, die Strukturierung von Kommunikation und die Organisation von Wissen. Dennoch hat diese Mediengattung in der historischen Forschung bisher nur wenig Beachtung erfahren. Das Buch schließt diese Forschungslücke, indem es untersucht, welchen Beitrag die directories dazu leisteten, Stadträume entzifferbar und navigierbar zu machen, sie zu deuten und mitzugestalten. Es eröffnet einen facettenreichen Blick auf das komplexe Verhältnis zwischen Medien und städtischem Erleben sowie auf die Wahrnehmung und Aneignung von Räumen. Zugleich leistet es einen Beitrag zur Historisierung alltäglicher und oft als selbstverständlicher betrachteter Techniken und Medien der räumlichen Orientierung.

The Civilising Offensive Christoph De Spiegeleer, 2018-12-03 This volume offers a multifaceted selection of studies on 19th century Belgian reformers and initiatives they instigated to solve the social question by civilising and moralising the lower classes. Around 1850 Belgium was continental Europe's most heavily industrialised state. From the mid-century until the Belle époque many international social reform associations were based in Belgium as well as their main international actors. This book aims to place the history of social, moral and educational reform in Belgium during the long 19th century within a broader European perspective. This collection of contributions by both young and established scholars from various disciplinary backgrounds not only fills some gaps in Belgian historiography but also offers a better understanding of broad epochal processes such as the bourgeois civilising offensive, the expansion of educational action and the historical growth of welfare states.

Selling British Columbia Michael Dawson, 2007-10-01 Selling British Columbia is an entertaining examination of the development of the tourist industry in British Columbia between 1890 and 1970. Michael Dawson argues that in order to understand the roots of the fully fledged consumer culture that emerged in Canada after the Second World War, it is necessary to understand the connections between the 1930s, 1940s and the postwar era. Cultural producers such as tourism promoters and the state infrastructure played important roles in fostering consumer demand, particularly during the Depression, the Second World War and throughout the postwar era. Dawson draws upon promotional pamphlets, newspapers, advertisements and films as well as archival sources regarding government, civic and international tourism organizations. Central to his book is an examination of the representation of popular imagery and of how aboriginal and British cultures were commodified and marketed to potential tourists. He also looks at the gendered aspect of these promotional campaigns, particularly during the 1940s, and challenges earlier interpretations regarding the relationship between tourism and nature in Canada. Historians have tended to focus on either the first wave of consumerism from the 1880s to the 1920s or else on the era of economic expansion that followed World War Two. As Dawson shows, the 1930-45 period in particular was an important and dynamic one in the creation of Canadian and British Columbian consumer culture Michael Dawson's highly readable and engaging account of the development of the British Columbia tourist industry will be welcomed by British Columbian and Canadian historians as well as other scholars of tourism and consumerism The SAGE Companion to the City Tim Hall, Phil Hubbard, John Rennie Short, 2008-05-21 This book pulls together an exceptional range of literature in addressing the complexity of contemporary patterns and processes of urbanization It offers a rich array of concepts and theories and is studded with fascinating examples that illustrate the changing nature of cities and urban life Paul Knox Virginia Tech University The SAGE Companion to the City is a tour de force of contemporary urban studies At once a stocktake showcase and springboard for scholarly approaches to cities and city life the editors have assembled a cohesive and convincing set of lucid insightful and critical essays of great quality Eschewing grand theory and deadening encyclopaedism the contributors refresh both longstanding concerns and explore new themes in ways both brilliantly accessible to newcomers and satisfying to the cognoscenti Robert Freestone University of New South Wales Organized in four sections The SAGE Companion to the City provides a systematic A Z to understanding the city that explains the interrelations between society culture and economy Histories explores power religion science and technology modernity and the landscape of the city Economies and Inequalities explores work and leisure globalisation innovation and the role of the state Communities explores migration and settlement segregation and division civility housing and homelessness Order and Disorder explores politics and policy planning and conflict law and order surveillance and terror An accessible guide to all areas of urban studies the text offers both a contemporary cutting edge reflection and measured historical and geographical reflection on urban studies It will be essential reading for students of any discipline interested in the city as an object of study A Foot in the Past Giorgio Riello, 2006 During the Enlightenment in a society that was increasingly urbanised and mobile footwear was an essential item of apparel This book considers not only the practical but also the symbolic meaning of footwear in France and England during the period from the end of the seventeenth to the mid nineteenth century
