The Big Bang Theory

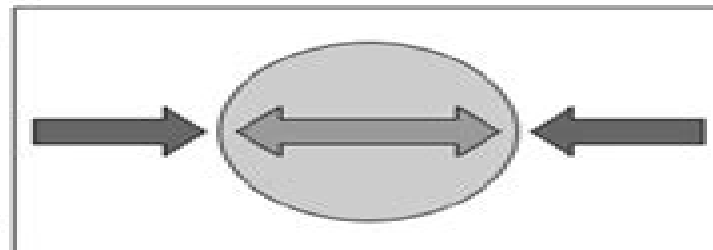

- The universe was formed from a cosmic explosion 14 billion years ago. The Earth is about 4.5 billion years old. The Sol* is 4.6 billion years old.
- Scientists believe that all matter in the universe began from a single point and exploded, causing new elements to fuse. The universe is still expanding.
- Matter produced in the Big Bang was 75% hydrogen and 25% helium.

Constellations BrainPop

- Constellations are groups of stars that resemble figures. Astronomers have taken the 88 constellations to divide the entire celestial sphere (the visible night sky).
- While they look close from our perspective, stars that make up constellations are very far apart. All visible things in the sky are in the Milky Way Galaxy.
- Circumpolar Constellations are positioned above one of the poles, thus show year round while other constellations are seasonal.
- Zodiac Constellations are visible in specific times of year and were used by the ancient world to tell certain things about you.

Black Holes BrainPop

- Black Holes are points of infinite density. It sucks everything in, tearing it into single atoms. It is a rip in space-time, the fabric of reality, so it is theorized that there might be a white hole on the other side of the rip where those things come out.
- They can be created two ways:
 - The Death of a Red Supergiant - the fusion of Hydrogen to Helium begins running out (outward force), and gravity takes over (inward force), crushing it to a single point (see diagram). Fusion vs. Gravity is a "tug of war" of forces.
 - The Collection of Matter in the Center of the Galaxy - when enough matter gathers at the center of a galaxy, the gravity pushing in creates an enormous black hole. There is one at the center of our galaxy.

The term Sol is used in this to refer to our sun.
