He had volunteered for the top secret mission out of a sense of patriotism. But now those who had recruited him wanted him dead. He was not supposed to survive the mission. The mission had been both high profile and high risk. And for the powers that had planned it, there could be no loose ends. The risks were too great. Brian Cahill carried a secret that could shake the government to its very core. For four years they had searched for him and for four years he had avoided capture. But now through a chance encounter they had found him. He was a liability that had to be eliminated. He would not see them coming and they would offer him no shelter, no quarters. They would tighten the noose and the terrible secret that he possessed would die with him. At least that was the plan. Moody's OTC Unlisted Manual, 1986.

Driving from Japan Wanda James, 2015-08-13. This study chronicles the success of the Japanese car in America. Starting with Japan's first gasoline powered car, the Takuri, it examines early Japanese inventors and automotive conditions in Japan, the arrival of Japanese cars in California in the late 1950s, consumer and media reactions to Japanese manufacturers, what obstacles they faced, initial sales, and how the cars gained popularity through shrewd marketing. Toyota, Honda, Datsun, Nissan, Mazda, Subaru, Isuzu, and Mitsubishi are profiled individually from their origins through the present. An examination follows of the forced cooperation between American and Japanese manufacturers, the present state of the industry in America, and the possible future of this union, most importantly in the race for a more environmentally sound vehicle.
