

Should Drinking Age Be Lowered To 18 Essay

Writing an essay on the topic of whether the drinking age should be lowered to 18 presents a multifaceted challenge. Firstly, it requires a deep understanding of the complexities surrounding alcohol consumption, including its effects on individuals and society. Additionally, one must consider legal and ethical implications, as well as statistical data and research findings related to underage drinking and its consequences.

Crafting a compelling argument necessitates thorough research to gather relevant evidence and perspectives from various sources. It involves critically analyzing differing viewpoints, anticipating counterarguments, and formulating a well-structured response supported by logical reasoning and credible evidence.

Furthermore, addressing the broader social, cultural, and psychological aspects of alcohol consumption adds layers of complexity to the essay. Factors such as peer pressure, societal norms, and individual responsibility must be carefully examined and integrated into the discussion.

Moreover, the sensitivity of the topic requires a thoughtful and respectful approach to avoid trivializing the potential harms associated with alcohol misuse or dismissing legitimate concerns about lowering the drinking age.

In summary, writing an essay on whether the drinking age should be lowered to 18 demands thorough research, critical thinking, and nuanced understanding of the multifaceted issues involved. It necessitates careful consideration of legal, ethical, social, and health-related perspectives to construct a well-informed argument.

Gender Influences

Donnalee Rubin, 1993 Donnalee Rubin examines the responses of thirty one freshman composition teachers to student writing and shows the negative effects of gender bias on assessment to prove that gender perceptions and expectations can influence assessment decisions that seem neutral on the surface Arguing that certain pedagogies are more likely to minimize gender bias than others Rubin believes that teachers are more likely to overcome the influence of gender bias on their teaching if they adopt a process based method and work intimately with their students through nondirective supportive conferences Rubin characterizes the conference process centered class as the type of environment in which maternal teaching can be cultivated She stresses that maternal can describe any teacher male or female who exhibits the nurturing and supportive qualities that the conference process approach embodies With a primary focus on the student's well being and development as a person and a writer the maternal teacher is in a better position to overcome gender bias that could distort the interpretation of student texts In order for writing instructors to increase their sensitivity to gender issues in assessment Rubin recommends that they self consciously engage in what she calls responsive reading Responsive reading occurs when the teacher reads with an eye toward providing the sorts of supportive feedback and dialectic exchange that will encourage student writers to think for themselves and to revise effectively Rubin argues that when teachers commit to a responsive reading pedagogy they are more likely to question their reactions to student writing along the lines of gender influence and to strive for self conscious awareness of how their own inner male female voices may distort their reading of student texts She challenges all writing teachers to become more aware of the inevitable challenge gender influence presents
