Darcy, Annie Tremblay, Miquel Simonet, 2017-07-06 A conversation between two people can only take place if the words intended by each speaker are successfully recognized. Spoken word recognition is at the heart of language comprehension. This automatic and smooth process remains a challenge for models of spoken word recognition. Both the process of mapping the speech signal onto stored representations for words and the format of the representation themselves are subject to debate. So far, existing research on the nature of spoken word representations has focused mainly on native speakers. The picture becomes even more complex when looking at spoken word recognition in a second language. Given that most of the world's speakers know and use more than one language, it is crucial to reach a more precise understanding of how bilingual and multilingual individuals encode spoken words in the mental lexicon and why spoken word recognition is more difficult in a second language than in the native language. Current models of native spoken word recognition operate under two assumptions: i) that listeners' perception of the incoming speech signal is optimal and ii) that listeners' lexical representations are accurate. As a result, lexical representations are easily activated and intended words are successfully recognized. However, these assumptions are compromised when applied to a later learned second language. For a variety of reasons, e.g. phonetic, phonological, orthographic, second language users may not perceive the speech signal optimally and they may still be refining the motor routines needed for articulation. Accordingly, their lexical representations may differ from those of native speakers, which may in turn inhibit their selection of the intended word forms. Second language users also have to solve a larger selection challenge, having words in more than one language to choose from. Thus, for second language users, the links between perception, lexical representations, orthography, and production are all but clear. Even for simultaneous bilinguals, important questions remain about the specificity and interdependence of their lexical representations and the factors influencing cross-language word activation. This Frontiers Research Topic seeks to further our understanding of the factors that determine how multilinguals recognize and encode spoken words in the mental lexicon, with a focus on the mapping between the input and lexical representations and on the quality of lexical representations.

Consuming and Producing Research in Communication Sciences and Disorders Robert Goldfarb, 2019-06-21 Consuming and Producing Research in Communication Sciences and Disorders is an exciting new textbook designed for undergraduate research methods in communication sciences and disorders (CSD) programs. It is also appropriate for first-year graduate students taking research methods courses in speech language pathology and audiology. The text guides students in attaining the competencies required to consume, produce, and disseminate research, and students will have the knowledge and skills that are necessary and sufficient to conduct research as is consistent with the duties of an academic professor. The text reviews what obligations an individual professor or not has before being permitted to do research. The emphasis is on clinically oriented professionals who can perform the research associated with professors. Part I on Consuming Research in CSD includes academic, clinical, integration of research as well as information required for consumption of research, such as research ethics, the scientific method types of research and how to critique a journal article and a diagnostic test Part II on Producing Research in CSD helps guide the undergraduate student in producing a capstone project or senior thesis and the master's student in producing a graduate thesis or research project Part II also addresses mentoring the Institutional Review Board and conducting academic and clinical research Part III addresses Disseminating Research in CSD from the traditional presenting and publishing academic and clinical research to the non traditional marketing social media and new technologies Key Features Each chapter begins with an Introduction and Learning Objectives to set the scene and prepare the student for what is covered Advanced Study Questions end each chapter and allow the student to review their skills Boxes throughout the text highlight key points and explore topics in more depth Disclaimer Please note that ancillary content such as documents audio and video etc may not be included as published in the original print version of this book Saunders
