Finney, 2008-11 Text extracted from opening pages of book A GUIDE TO MUSIC APPRECIATION BY THEODORE M FINNEY UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH HAJRCOURT BRACE AND COMPANY KJ NEW YORK PREFACE MUSIC is the universal language 7 This quotation perhaps more often than any other is used whenever the occasion seems to demand that something important be said about music It is almost always used with the implication that the universality of music nullifies the necessity of learning music as a language This implication is false Music in the sense that it is a language must be learned just as any other lan guage must be learned It is true that some individuals learn languages more easily than others it is true too that most of us have forgotten how we learned enough of our mother tongue to use it for communication But it must not be forgotten that we do learn even our mother tongue We study it formally as long as we attend school and most of us never master its use to the point where we are independent of such aids as the dictionary The problem of learning is even more evident in connection with mastering a foreign language The difficul ties of grammar and syntax to say nothing of the necessity for constant reference to a glossary make the process of learning a new language a poignant illustration of the difficulties which the necessity for communication presents to the learner For the ordinary person who wishes to understand music its language stands somewhere between the mother tongue and a foreign language He has been conditioned to its sound because he has been hearing it most of his life But he fails IV PREFACE to comprehend much that he might hear because he has not learned to understand The traveler abroad who does his shopping and eating only in the places which display the sign English Spoken Here 5 has much in common with the person whose tired reaction to a symphony concert is Never again Both result from failure to have learned to understand a language This book is the result of some years spent in the attempt to help learners to understand music Its fundamental premises are that music is part of the cultural heritage of all and that it exists for an audience which in the very nature of things is made up of listeners who are not professionally trained musicians The kind of help needed by a listener is quite different from a training for professional musicianship Conversely it can be asserted with some degree of truth that professional training does not necessarily produce an intelligent listener The present book is the result then of an attempt to present music to the listener so that he may understand it intelligently Much that can be learned about music and musicians is of no concern to the listener as a part of the technique of his listening This does not mean that any limit should be placed on the listener's curiosity about music It does mean however that there is a vast difference between what he needs in order actually to hear music and what he might learn that has very little to do with his listening It is not fair to the person whose interest has brought him into a classroom where he expects to learn how to hear music to spend time and energy discussing matters which have only slight bearing on what he wants to learn Learning to hear music has much in common with the learning of a verbal language No one would expect to learn Russian by reading about it in English One cannot learn music unless he is brought into actual active contact with music This book tries to encourage and direct the active contact which the student makes with music The student must make progress in learning the language he must himself feel that he is getting on terms of better understanding with music It has been the author's experience with students whose number now runs to several thousand that the method which this book develops will produce that effect Any book however can provide o
