playing games and a lower proportion perceive risks with negative consequences or have concerns about online risks compared with the reference group study III Significantly more parents of adolescents with ID state that their adolescent never uses smartphones or social media compared with the reference group Strategies used to handle the digital environment and take part in internet activities were found and described such as getting support from others reducing the number of internet enabled devices used and personalising them Gaining access to internet content and performing internet activities was facilitated by picture word and voice based strategies which were used by adolescents and young adults with both mild and moderate ID study I Conclusions The conclusions are that the results show a lag in internet access and use and in digital participation by adolescents and young adults with ID Adolescents and young adults with ID were accessing and using the internet in similar ways to the reference group but to a lesser extent The impact of the participants environment together with their lack of certain abilities make the development of digital competencies difficult for them The result that parents of adolescents with ID perceive more opportunities and fewer risks associated with the internet provides new knowledge to support positive risk taking in internet use and enable digital participation by adolescents and young adults with ID Support can be developed in collaboration between the adolescent young adult their parents and teachers and staff in community based services and should involve physical social and digital environmental adaptations These can enable the development of digital competencies and minimise the lag in digital participation in everyday life which is needed for participation in today s digitalised society Bakgrund till avhandlingen Internetanvändning är en integrerad del av vardagen i dagens samhällssamfund bland ungdomar Internet används för att utföra en mängd aktiviteter i vardagen av alltfler personer Dock är kunskapen om tillgång till samt användning av internet i vardagliga aktiviteter för ungdomar med intellektuell funktionsnedsättning IF bristfällig kunskap behövs om digitala kompetenser och digital delaktighet i vardagen för ungdomar och unga vuxna med IF Syftet med avhandlingen Det övergripande syftet med denna avhandling var att utforska och beskriva tillgång till och användning av internet och digital delaktighet i vardagen bland ungdomar och unga vuxna med IF Hur studierna genomfördes Avhandlingen bygger på resultat från tre delstudier I studie I samlades data in via observationer av och uppföljande intervjuer med 15 deltagare med IF i åldern 13-24 år Fokus låg på tillgång till och användning av internet i deras vardagliga miljöer skola arbete hemma eller på fritiden Data analyserades med kvalitativ innehållsanalys I studie II och III var designen jämförande tvärsnittsstudier Nationella enkäter från Statens Medier och internetanvändning användes där jämförande data från referensgrupper kunde erhållas I studie II gjordes kognitiva anpassningar av den nationella enkäten om medie och internetanvändning i flera steg för målgruppen ungdomar med IF i åldern 13-20 år Anpassningen till en lätt version av enkäten med bildstöd för de som behövde det gjorde den möjligt att skicka till ett totalurval av elever från alla skolor i fyra olika kommuner i två olika regioner i Sverige I studie III användes den nationella enkäten till följande om möjligheter och risker med internet och medieanvändning för deras ungdomar Enkäten skickades till ett urval av 318
