constitutive of reference in laboratory sciences as cultural sign systems and their manipulation and superposition collectively shared classifications and associated conceptual frameworks and various forms of collective action and social institutions This raises the question of how much modes of representation and specific types of sign systems mobilized to construct them contribute to reference Semioticians have argued that sign systems are not merely passive media for expressing preconceived ideas but actively contribute to meaning Sign systems are culturally loaded with meaning stemming from previous practical applications and social traditions of applications In new local contexts of application they not only transfer stabilized meaning but also can be used as active resources to add new significance and modify previous meaning This view is supported by several analyses presented in this volume Sign systems can be implemented like tools that are manipulated and superposed with other types of signs to forge new representations The mode of representation made possible by applying and manipulating specific types of representational tools such as diagrammatic rather than mathematical representations or Berzelian formulas rather than verbal language contributes to meaning and forges fine grained differentiations between scientists concepts Taken together the essays contained in this volume give us a multifaceted picture of the broad variety of modes of representation in nineteenth century and twentieth century laboratory sciences of the way scientists juxtaposed and integrated various representations and of their pragmatic use as tools in scientific and industrial practice Academy, with which are Incorporated Literature and the English Review, 1883 Cavendish Christa Jungnickel, Russell McCormack, 1996 The Cavendishes flourished during the high tide of British aristocracy following the revolution of 1688-89 and the case can be made that this aristocracy knew its finest hour when Henry Cavendish gently laid his delicate weights in the pan of his incomparable precision balance For this it took two generations and two kinds of invention one in social forms and the other in scientific technique This biography tells how it came to pass Book jacket The Educational Times, and Journal of the College of Preceptors, 1895 Educational Times, 1888 Theory Choice in the History of Chemical Practices Emma Tobin, Chiara Ambrosio, 2016-05-26 This collection of essays examines the question of theory from the perspective of the history of chemistry Through the lens of a number of different periods the authors provide a historical analysis of the question of theory in the history of chemical practice The consensus picture that emerges is that the history of science tells us a much more complex story about theory choice A glimpse at scientific practice at the time shows that different competing as well as non competing theories were used in the context of the scientific practice at the various times and sometimes played a pivotal pedagogical role in training the next generation of chemists This brief brings together a history of chemical practice and in so doing reveals that theory choice is conceptually more problematic than was originally conceived This volume was produced as part of the Ad HOC chemistry research group hosted by University College London
