

Systems Description

Audio Panel

The audio panel is used to interface cockpit or cabin headsets and microphones to the telephone system. The SL15 audio panel has a "TEL" position on its selection switch that connects the audio channels to the "Tip/Ring" telephone interface that is tied to the RCOM-100. The audio panel controls can be used by themselves to answer an incoming call, but must be used in conjunction with the PTA-12 Dialer device to make a phone call or to keep a phone call active while changing audio panel selections.

PTA-12 POTS Telephone Adaptor

(Dial Device)

The PTA-12 also connects to the "Tip/Ring" interface of the RCOM-100. The PTA-12 could optionally be wired directly to the headset/microphone system, but its primary function in the Cessna 180 equipped with the SL15 audio panel is to provide dialing capability to initiate a phone call.

The PTA-12 Keypad includes the numbers 0 – 9 and the * and # keys for dialing telephone numbers. There are also control buttons – Volume Up/Down, Redial, Flash, Hold, and Hook.

In this application the Volume, Hold and Flash buttons are not used.

"Hook" is used to start and stop a call that is being initiated from the airplane. It is not used when answering an incoming call unless the user wants to keep the phone line connected while changing audio panel selections.

The "Hook" button can be pressed after answering a call on the audio panel in order to keep the line connected to the calling party while audio panel selections are changed (for example: if a call is in progress, but the pilot needs to change the audio panel switch to "COM" or "NAV" and does not want to hang up on the caller).

"Redial" is used to dial the last dialed number again.

In installations where the PTA-12 audio system is used with headsets and microphones or as an AUX input to an audio panel without "Phone" capabilities, the Volume and Hold functions would be available for their normal functions.

Indicator

There is a "Hook Status / Ringer Active" annunciator located above the "Hook" button. The LED is off when the unit is inactive ("On-hook") and is illuminated continuously when the unit is active ("Off-hook"). If the unit is inactive and waiting for a call the LED will FLASH to indicate an incoming call.
