

What are the three types of family studies?

1. Twinship studies comparing monozygotic twins (identical twins) and dizygotic twins (fraternal twins) that are reared together, which helps to assess genetic influences, and 2. Adoption studies that try to separate out the effects of the environment.

Genetic Influences

It is clear to researchers that study of mental illness is complex and requires:

1. Research using family studies, twinship studies and more recently

2. Research using of these approaches has changed over time and what is going on in the brain is complex.
