Digital Platforms and Global Law Bassan, Fabio, 2021-11-17 Digital Platforms and Global Law focuses on digital platforms and identifies their relevant legal profiles in terms of transnational and international law It qualifies digital platforms as private legal orders which exercise the legislative executive and para jurisdictional power within them Starting from this assumption the author studies the relationship between these orders and state transnational and international orders and concludes that the power of states to impose rules on platforms is different in terms of their external in relation to other platforms and states and internal in their own legal system action

Housing Under Platform Capitalism Thomas Aguilera, Francesca Artioli, Claire Colomb, 2025-06-17 Since the birth of Airbnb in 2008 many of the world's cities have been transformed by platform mediated short term accommodation a phenomenon suspected of disturbing local life and removing dwellings from local housing inventories Drawing on mixed method multi level comparative research in twelve large European cities coauthors Thomas Aguilera Francesca Artioli and Claire Colomb show that strikingly different regulatory regimes have emerged around short term rentals In some cities policies aim to curb this practice in others regulations are simply meant to support the market These responses are motivated by a variety of political choices and pressures from grassroots movements to property interests the tourism industry and municipal welfare and housing systems This book makes a crucial contribution to comparative urban politics in the twenty first century investigating the capacity of local states to govern housing markets and platform capitalism in an era of globalized human and capital flows In the face of this worldwide shift Housing Under Platform Capitalism insists that institutions and regulations can champion the public good by protecting the right to housing and ultimately limiting corporate power      Hospitality and Travel Marketing Alastair M.
