Demirci, Joop van der Schee, 2015-08-31 This book is an initiative presented by the Commission on Geographical Education of the International Geographical Union It focuses particularly on what has been learned from geospatial projects and research from the past decades of implementing geospatial technologies GST in formal and informal education The objective of this publication is to inform an international audience of teachers professionals scholars and policymakers about the state of the art and prospects of geospatial practices GPs as organized activities that use GST and lessons learned in relation to geographical education GST make up an advanced body of knowledge developed by practitioners of geographic information systems GIS remote sensing RS global positioning systems GPS and digital cartography DC GST have long been applied in many different sectors however their first use in higher education began in the early 1980s and then diffused to secondary schools during the 1990s Starting with GIS and RS it evolved into a much broader context as GST expanded to include GPS and DC with new communication technologies and Internet applications GST have been used around the world as a combination of tools and special techniques to make research teaching and learning more effective Michigan School

Earth Sciences and Resources, Geographical Sciences Committee, Committee on Support for Thinking Spatially: The Incorporation of Geographic Information Science Across the K-12 Curriculum, 2005-02-03 Learning to Think Spatially examines how spatial thinking might be incorporated into existing standards based instruction across the school curriculum. Spatial thinking must be recognized as a fundamental part of K-12 education and as an integrator and a facilitator for problem solving across the curriculum. With advances in computing technologies and the increasing availability of geospatial data, spatial thinking will play a significant role in the information based economy of the twenty first century. Using appropriately designed support systems tailored to the K-12 context, spatial thinking can be taught formally to all students. A geographic information system (GIS) offers one example of a high technology support system that can enable students and teachers to practice and apply spatial thinking in many areas of the curriculum.

Geography for Life Geography Education Standards Project (U.S.), 1994. These geography standards are subtitled What Every Young American Should Know and Be Able To Do In Geography and constitute a set of voluntary benchmarks that every school and school district may use as guidelines for developing their own curricula. The standards for grades K-4, 5-8 and 9-12 specify the essential subject matter skills and perspectives that all students should have in order to attain high levels of competency. The standards provide every parent, teacher, curriculum developer and business and policy leader with a set of challenging expectations for all students. The purpose of standards for geography is to bring all student up to internationally competitive levels to meet the demands of a new age and a different world. For the United States to maintain leadership and prosper in the 21st century the education system must be tailored to the needs of productive and responsible citizenship in the global economy. The guide is divided into 8 chapters: 1 The Geographic View of Our World, 2 The Components of Geography Education, 3 Geographic Skills and Perspectives, 4 The Subject Matter of Geography, 5 National Geography Standards Grades K-4, 6 National Geography Standards Grades 5-8, 7 National Geography Standards Grades 9-12 and 8 Student Achievement in Geography. A conclusion discusses thinking geographically and the role of parents in geography education. Five appendices and a glossary complete the document. DK
