Alzheimer's Renée L. Beard, 2016-04-26 News of Alzheimer s disease is constantly in the headlines Every day we hear heart wrenching stories of people caring for a loved one who has become a shell of their former self of projections about rising incidence rates and of cures that are just around the corner However we don t see or hear from the people who actually have the disease In Living with Alzheimer s Ren e L Beard argues that the exclusively negative portrayals of Alzheimer s are grossly inaccurate To understand what life with memory loss is really like Beard draws on intensive observations of nearly 100 seniors undergoing cognitive evaluation as well as post diagnosis interviews with individuals experiencing late in life forgetfulness Since we all forget sometimes seniors with an Alzheimer s diagnosis ultimately need to be socialized into medicalized interpretations of their forgetfulness In daily life people with the disease are forced to manage stigma and the presumption of incompetence on top of the actual symptoms of their ailment The well meaning public and not their dementia becomes the major barrier to a happy life for those affected Beard also examines how these perceptions affect treatment for Alzheimer s Interviews with clinicians and staff from the Alzheimer s Association reveal that despite the best of intentions pejorative framings of life with dementia fuel both clinical practice and advocacy efforts These professionals perpetuate narratives about self loss impending cures and the economic and emotional burden to families and society even if they do not personally believe them Yet Beard also concludes that in spite of these trends most of the diagnosed individuals in her study achieve a graceful balance between accepting the medical label and resisting the social stigma that accompanies it In stark contrast to the messages we receive this book provides an unprecedented view into the ways that people with early Alzheimer s actively and deliberately navigate their lives

metaphorical uses of age to create transformative potential The New Neighborhood Senior Center Joyce Weil, 2014-11-03

In 2011 seven thousand American baby boomers those born between 1946 and 1964 turned sixty five daily As this largest U S generation ages cities municipalities and governments at every level must grapple with the allocation of resources and funding for maintaining the quality of life health and standard of living for an aging population In The New Neighborhood Senior Center Joyce Weil uses in depth ethnographic methods to examine a working class senior center in Queens New York She explores the ways in which social structure directly affects the lives of older Americans and traces the role of political social and economic institutions and neighborhood processes in the decision to close such centers throughout the city of New York Many policy makers and gerontologists advocate a concept of aging in place whereby the communities in which these older residents live provide access to resources that foster and maintain their independence But all aging in place is not equal and the success of such efforts depends heavily upon the social class and availability of resources in any given community Senior centers expanded in part by funding from federal programs in the 1970s were designed as focal points in the provision of community based services However for the first wave of boomers the role of these centers has come to be questioned Declining government support has led to the closings of many centers even as the remaining centers are beginning to rebrand to attract the boomer generation However The New Neighborhood Senior Center demonstrates the need to balance what the boomers want from centers with the needs of frailer or more vulnerable elders who rely on the services of senior centers on a daily basis Weil challenges readers to consider what changes in social policies are needed to support or supplement senior centers and the functions they serve At Home in the City Stacy Torres, 2025 Uncovers how people aged 60 and older struggle survive and thrive in twenty first century urban America To understand elders experiences of aging in place sociologist Stacy Torres spent five years with longtime New York City residents as they coped with health setbacks depression gentrification financial struggles the accumulated losses of neighbors friends and family and other everyday challenges The sensitive portrait Torres paints in At Home in the City moves us beyond stereotypes of older people as either rich and pampered or downtrodden and frail to capture the multilayered complexity of late life These pages chronicle how a nondescript bakery in Manhattan served as a public living room providing company to ease loneliness and a sympathetic ear to witness the monumental and mundane struggles of late life Through years of careful observation Torres peels away the layers of this oft neglected social world and explores the constellation of relationships and experiences that Western culture often renders invisible or frames as a problem At Home in the City strikes a realistic balance as it highlights how people find support flex their resilience and assert their importance in their communities in old age Grandmothers at Work Madonna Harrington Meyer, 2014-05-02 While all of the grandmothers in Harrington Meyer s book are pleased to spend time with their grandchildren many are readjusting work schedules using vacation and sick leave time gutting retirement accounts and postponing retirement to care for grandchildren Some simply want to do this others do it in part because they have more security and flexibility on the job than their daughters do at their relatively new jobs Many are sequential grandmothers caring for one grandchild after the other as they are born in very intensive forms of grandmothering Some also report that they are putting off retirement out of economic necessity in part due to the amount of financial help they are providing their grandchildren Finally some are also caring for their frail older parents or ailing spouses just as intensively Most expect to continue feeling the pinch of paid and unpaid work for many years before their retirement

Inside Retirement Housing Sam Clark, 2022-11-11 Through stories and visual vignettes it presents a range of stakeholders involved in the design construction management and habitation of third age housing in the UK
