Teaching to Prepare Advocates Mike Yough, Lynley

Anderman, 2022-10-01 This book is the fourth volume in the six part series Theory to Practice Educational Psychology for Teachers and Teaching The objective of most other volumes in this series is to help instructors apply and model fundamental principles of learning assessment motivation and development in preparing their students for the diverse multidimensional uncertain and socially embedded classrooms in which these future educators will teach This volume is a strong compliment to others in the series as it prepares readers to be better positioned to advocate for principles of psychology in their programs and departments and to prepare preservice teachers to do likewise in the K 12 classrooms they will soon guide Even more this volume will help instructors in shaping pre service teachers to be stronger advocates for their own students This volume is organized around two themes 1 Advocating for principles and practices of educational psychology and 2 advocating for students These themes go hand in hand While advocating for educational psychology principles and evidence based practices in their schools teachers also are called upon to advocate for and empower historically marginalized groups of students Topics in Part I include development of intercultural competency implementation of professional learning communities culturalizing the curriculum journalistic learning incorporation of inquiry learning and universal design Topics in Part II include supporting student self advocacy creating an allyship with LGBTQ students advocating for victims of bullying and supporting students with mental health needs

Teachers Versus the Public Paul E. Peterson, Michael B.

Henderson, Martin R. West, 2014-04-29 A comprehensive exploration of 21st Century school politics Teachers versus the Public offers the first comparison of the education policy views of both teachers and the public as a whole and reveals a deep broad divide between the opinions held by citizens and those who teach in the public schools Among the findings Divisions between teachers and the public are wider and deeper than differences between other groups often thought to contest school policy such as Republicans and Democrats the young and the old the rich and the poor or African Americans and whites The teacher public gap is widest on such issues as merit pay teacher tenure reform impact of teacher unions school vouchers charter schools and requirements to test students annually Public support for school vouchers for all students charter schools and parent trigger laws increases sharply when people are informed of the national ranking of student performance in their local school district Public willingness to give local schools high marks its readiness to support higher spending levels and its support for teacher unions all decline when the public learns the national ranking of their local schools. On most issues, teacher opinion does not change in response to new information nearly as much as it does for the public as a whole. In fact, the gap between what teachers and the public think about school reform grows even wider when both teachers and the public are given more information about current school performance, current expenditure levels, and current teacher pay. The book provides the first experimental study of public and teacher opinion. Using a recently developed research strategy, the authors ask differently worded questions about the same topic to randomly chosen segments of representative groups of citizens. This approach allows them to identify the impact on public opinion of new information on issues such as student performance and school expenditures in each respondent's community. The changes in public opinion when citizens receive information about school performance are largest in districts that perform below the national average. Altogether, the results indicate that support for many school reforms would increase if common core state standards were established and implemented in such a way as to inform the public about the quality of their local schools. These and many other findings illuminate the distance between teacher opinions and those of the public at large.

About the Research In partnership with the Harvard Program on Education Policy and Governance and the journal Education Next, authors Paul E. Peterson, Martin West, and Michael Henderson surveyed nationally representative samples of teachers and the public as a whole annually between 2007 and 2013.

Meeting the Challenges to Measurement in an Era of Accountability Henry Braun, 2016-01-29 Under pressure and support from the federal government, states have increasingly turned to indicators based on student test scores to evaluate teachers and schools as well as students themselves. The focus thus far has been on test scores in those subject areas where there is a sequence of consecutive tests such as in mathematics or English language arts with a focus on grades 4-8. Teachers in these subject areas, however, constitute less than thirty percent of the teacher workforce in a district. Comparatively little has been written about the measurement of achievement in the other grades and subjects. This volume seeks to remedy this imbalance by focusing on the assessment of student achievement in a broad range of grade levels and subject areas with particular attention to their use in the evaluation of teachers and schools in all. It addresses traditional end-of-course tests as well as alternative measures such as portfolios, exhibitions, and student learning objectives. In each case, issues related to design and development, psychometric considerations, and validity challenges are covered from both a generic and a content-specific perspective. The NCME Applications of Educational Measurement and Assessment series includes edited volumes designed to inform research-based applications of educational measurement and assessment. Edited by leading experts, these books are comprehensive and practical resources on the latest developments in the field.
