Industrial Policy Beyond the Crisis David Bailey, Helena Lenihan, Josep-Maria Arauzo-Carod, 2014-06-11

After years of official disrepute industrial policy IP is back in vogue at regional national and international levels driven by concerns over competitiveness globalisation de industrialisation unemployment and the comparatively slow growth of the EU economy especially in this post recession phase At the same time IP has been seen as a catalyst for designing economic recovery strategies at regional national and international levels as well as being a concerted strategy to develop new clean tech industries to tackle environmental challenges If anything the recent global recession and credit crunch have highlighted the fragility of some states and localities economic development paths and the unbalanced nature of their economies in terms of an over reliance on sectors such as retail financial services and construction to the detriment of manufacturing This also suggests an accompanying need for greater economic diversity so as to avoid over dependencies on certain sectors and a better balance of ownerships forms But what should be the shape of IP in the wake of the crisis and how can IP rebalance economies help support sustainable development and catalyse new technologies and innovations whilst learning lessons from past experience and debate This edited volume examines these questions through a wide range of diverse contributions from expert international authors This book was originally published as a special issue of Policy Studies

Pathways from the Periphery Stephan Haggard, 1990 Pathways from the Periphery is an innovative interpretation of the development of the newly industrializing countries NICs which now dominate Third World industry and manufacturing trade While such countries as Brazil and Mexico have achieved industrialization through strategies intended to foster self reliance the East Asian NICs South Korea Taiwan Hong Kong and Singapore have grown rapidly through an aggressive policy promoting the export of manufactured goods Stephan Haggard provides the first comprehensive comparison of the politics of industrialization in these East Asian and Latin American countries and offers new evidence on current issues in comparative political economy including the implications of different growth paths for dependency equity and democracy Recognizing the influence on development strategies of external shocks such as depression war and reduced access to foreign capital

Haggard emphasizes the importance of domestic political institutions for economic decision making. The East Asian NICs are characterized by close but regulated business government alliances, weak labor movements and politically insulated and administratively capable states. Factors Haggard shows that have facilitated flexible and coherent industrial policies. He argues that domestic policy choices can shape the external constraints states face. The author considers in detail why Latin America's long standing efforts to achieve self reliance have ironically resulted in a dependence on international capital greater than that of the East Asian countries. Addressing a long standing debate on the relationship between industrialization strategy and regime type, Haggard carefully assesses the connection between growth and democratic politics. Despite their authoritarian growth models, the Asian NICs have, he observes, achieved greater equity than their Latin American counterparts. Although the success of export led growth has in the past been associated with authoritarian rule, Haggard argues that no compelling theoretical reasons preclude democratic governments from achieving strong economic performance. Breaking new ground in theoretical inquiry and empirical research, Pathways from the Periphery will be welcomed by political economists, scholars and students of comparative politics, historians of Asian and Latin American public policy and others concerned with the challenge of economic development.

Towards an Institutional Setup for Industrial Policy in Late Industrialization in the 21st Century Jan Grumiller, Werner G. Raza, 2019. Political and scholarly debates on the potentials and constraints of inclusive and sustainable development in the global periphery are at the core of the developmental discourse. This paper argues that discussions on the effectiveness, inclusiveness and sustainability of economic development need to take the political economic contexts of specific peripheral countries into account. The paper highlights that the more recent literature related to the developmental state debate provides valuable insights to this end but needs i) further conceptual extension in particular with respect to the role of social inclusion and hegemony and ii) operationalization in order to be useful from a policy perspective. This paper aims to add to these two gaps in the literature.

The Practice of Industrial Policy John Page, Finn Tarp, 2017-03-30. This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY-NC-SA 3.0 IGO licence. It is free to read at Oxford Scholarship Online and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations. Much of the information relevant to policy formulation for industrial development is held by the private sector, not by public officials. There is therefore fairly broad agreement in the development literature that some form of structured engagement, often referred to as close or strategic coordination between the public and private sectors, is needed both to assist in the design of appropriate policies and to provide feedback on their implementation. There is less agreement on how that engagement should be structured, how its objectives should be defined and how success should be measured. In fact, the academic literature on close coordination provides little practical guidance on how governments interested in developing a framework for government business engagement should go about doing it. The burden of this lack of guidance falls most heavily on Africa, where despite 20 years of growth, lack of structural transformation has slowed job creation and the pace of poverty reduction Increasingly African governments are seeking to design and implement policies to encourage the more rapid growth of high productivity industries and in the process confronting the need to engage constructively with the private sector These efforts have met with mixed results For sustained success in structural transformation new policies and new approaches to government business coordination will be needed In 2014 the Korea International Cooperation Agency and UNU WIDER launched a joint research project on The Practice of Industrial Policy The objective of the project was to help African policy makers develop better coordination between the public and private sectors in order to identify the constraints to faster structural transformation and to design implement and monitor policies to remove them This book written by national researchers and international experts presents the results of that research
