The Improbable Swervings of Atoms Christopher Bursk, 2005-08-04 Winner of the 2004 Donald Hall Prize in Poetry The Improbable Swervings of Atoms follows the comedic often painful physical and emotional travails of a young boy growing up in 1950s America He watches the McCarthy hearings conquers the Congo assassinates the president has his head stuffed into a toilet drops his uniform on the fifty yard line and tries to make sense of Lucretius's De Rerum Natura The poems engage history in a very intimate way revealing how a boy as he matures attempts to understand the world around him his own physical development the people in his life and what it means to live in a country and time where it is impossible to disengage oneself from world events where in fact the quest for identity is an act that requires one to rewrite history in personal terms The First Inhabitants of Arcadia (p) Christopher Bursk, 2006 The titles sing their lettered songs An Ode to j M m m Good and O in Trouble Here are reading lessons the author's exploration of the curses and blessings of the word It is about the fall from paradise and the gifts that fall makes possible And over the whole book broods the great lexicographer Samuel Johnson that deeply troubled caretaker of the mother tongue More than an ABC book this collection asks questions at the very heart of how we understand the world and shows us the glory and silliness at the heart of human life Poets &

A Car Stops a Door Opens Christopher Bursk, 2017 Poetry grounded in both childhood and adulthood for anyone who remembers being a kid and longing for something you can't put a name to Not afraid to be naked and laugh at this nakedness it knows the sublime and the ridiculous and embraces both      The First Inhabitants of Arcadia Christopher Bursk, 2006-01-01 Herman Melville Matthew Arnold Sarah Orne Jewett Dusty Rhodes and Hoyt Wilhelm skinny dip and pick up gondoliers and cut figure eights into the ice in Christopher Bursk's new collection But the main cast of characters for these poems is the alphabet itself the first inhabitants of Arcadia now homesick curious exiles from Eden Here are a boy's first investigations into the nature of language as he studies the backs of baseball cards and a young man's infatuation with the F word The poems carry us from the picket line and a county jail and the canals of Venice all the way to a hotel room and a father's suicide note They conclude with September 11 and a confrontation of the potential and painful limits of language The titles sing their lettered songs An Ode to j M m m Good and O in Trouble Here are reading lessons the author's exploration of the curses and blessings of the word It is about the fall from paradise and the gifts that fall makes possible And over the whole book broods the great lexicographer Samuel Johnson that deeply troubled caretaker of the mother tongue More than an ABC book this collection asks questions at the very heart of how we understand the world and shows us the glory and silliness at the heart of human life      Let X=X Cleveland Wall, 2019-09-16 In Let X X poet Cleveland Wall accepts the intrusion of the external into the mindscape as a gracious host She sits with it yielding space even after the ordinary becomes the guest who doesn't know when to leave Her poems evoke these hours written in the space of exasperated patience increasingly released from courtesy Despite any lingering lures of couch Wall is at her best when she excuses herself for the teapot and heads out through the back door owing nothing to the empty cups Elynn Alexander editor at Full of Crow Press The Dictionary in My Head Slattern Dromomania Once I Thought I Was Wrong But I was Mistaken Apothecary Dream My Rogue Self The Window on Nobody Home Hydrangea Rage skim the Table of Contents of Cleveland Wall's Let X X and you immediately get an idea of the rich and varied play of the mindset loose in this book Here is a wry quirky intelligent generous probing voice that will knock you off balance a little but always pull you back to your metric feet Cleveland Wall presents us a fallen world but does so in a language so engaging and regenerative we are invited to embrace this world in all of troublesome and marvelous eccentricities Once you have read this book you will want to read it again And again Its electricity becomes your own on any page you can tap into its power and re-charge yourself Christopher Bursk author of Improbable Swervings of Atoms What is the point of dreaming about the possible one of the poems in Cleveland Wall's Let X

X asks as it takes the reader on one of many flights of imagination with curiosity and love of language offered in this collection. Playful, wise, and filled with delights, Wall's poems ponder the ordinary objects and occurrences of daily life: an oak leaf falling on a head, a flash of mylar confetti in a carpet, the question of a cup of tea with a rueful intelligence and keen gaze that magnify and deepen all that they consider. Hayden Saunier, author of How to Wear This Body      Ovid at Fifteen Christopher Bursk, 2003. Christopher Bursk's latest collection is not just profoundly honest; it is profoundly brave. These astonishing poems explore the space between sensuality, sexuality, and love, a landscape in which flawed human beings give birth to the flawed human beings who will one day take care of them, each generation screwing up even as it adds to the universal fund of beauty and compassion. Above all, Ovid at Fifteen reminds us what it means to feel the wonder of life too keenly to want to throw yourself off the cliff, plunge into the very heart of color. If Bursk's ordinary yet mythic heroes hold back, they do so not out of cowardice but because they remember what happened to Icarus. And so they watch and dream and feel and thus make a living out of aching. The greatness of this book lies in its immortalizing that ache, that delicious pain.
